dertaken by early Rotary clubs, but crippled children work is now a close second. There are 2,100 clubs having Boys' Work committees; 1,700 clubs doing Crippled Children Work; 1,500 clubs with student loan or scholarship funds, and 600 clubs engaged in rural-urban acquaintance activities.

An example of the efforts which many clubs are making to bring about a better relationship between the farmer and the city dweller is the meeting of the Canton, Ohio, Rotary Club to which 113 farmers were invited. The sincere and cordial welcome extended the farmers resulted in establishing a friendly bond, increasing social and business contact and clearing away any misunderstandings which may have existed.

Rotary clubs throughout the world are interested in the advancement of their communities in every respect. Establishing memorials and promoting the building of highways, encouraging hygiene and sanitation, building rest-camps and recreation centers for mothers and for underprivileged and undernourished children, schooling facilities for men and women of different citizenship, dental clinics and kindred activities are only a part of the program of every Rotary club.

A clinic where thousands of blind babies were examined and treated was established through a fund raised by the Rotary club of Shanghai, China, and the eye-sight of hundreds of these infants was eventually restored. The Rotary Club of Cienfuegos, Cuba, organized a monster parade and secured 20,000 signatures to a petition to the Cuban legislature which resulted in a $60,000 appropriation for the construction of trunk line highways in Cuba. The first successful Community Chest fund in South Africa was sponsored by the Rotary Club of Cape Town.

Milan, Italy Rotarians raised a large fund for pensions for widowed mothers, enabling them to maintain their homes and rear their children. The Tampico, Mexico, Rotary Club sponsored a campaign for establishment of Boy Scout troops in the neighboring states and finally enlisted the aid of the federal Department of Education in organizing troops of Girl Scouts.

Visits of Mexican boys into American homes were arranged by the Rotary Club of San Antonio, Camp Cheerful, New York, on Fire Island, out in the harbor, is maintained for crippled boys by the New York Rotary Club, where the idea of a nation-wide, and later a world-wide, Boys' Week originated some years ago. The summer camp of 1927 cared for 127 boys representing 13 nationalities. Free medical treatment for sixteen boys from nearly as many countries was provided by the Rotary Club of Cichy, France.

The Rotary Club of Auckland, New Zealand presented prizes in a ceremony of public recognition to the boys who, at the risk of their lives, went into a collapsed mine and rescued miners and pit boys overcome with dangerous gases. The Tampa, Florida Rotary Club found that as a result of its work among delinquent boys, the judge of the juvenile court reported not a single boy arraigned before him for delinquency for the past year.

The improvement of trade relations and encouraging the adoption of business ethics is becoming more and more a part of the program of every Rotary club. The fostering of more honorable and friendly relations among employers and employees, among competitors in business, both in national and international trade is having its effect in improved international understanding and friendship.

One hundred twenty-six codes of correct business practices have been adopted directly as a result of the efforts of Rotarian members of various trade associations. The Rotary Code of Ethics, subscribed to by every Rotarian, has encouraged aged them to bring a similar code to their professional, trade and business associations.

Rotarian H. A. Bennett of Nottingham, England, as a result of his interest in Rotary's Business Methods program, wrote a code of standards for the motor trades, for publication in a trade magazine. It attracted so much attention that the Institute of Motor Traders requested permission to adopt it as the Institute code. Similarly Rotarian George W. Foulds of Auckland, New Zealand, secured adoption of a code which he helped to prepare, setting forth the standards of the drapers and clothiers of New Zealand.

Sydney Pascall, past president of the Rotary clubs in Great Britain and Ireland, has held the presidency of the Manufacturing Confectioner's Alliance for eight years and has been active in the organization of many Food and Trade Unions and Federations. He has been for many years an active exponent of ethical business practices and for this reason was appointed Rotary's representative to the League of Nations at Geneva last year. The recommendations, particularly regarding bribery and misdescription of goods, submitted to the Conference by Rotarian Pascall, were accepted and incorporated in the report of the Conference.

Raymond M. Havens, a past president of Rotary International, has for many years operated successfully a plan of co-partnership among the many employees in his large printing establishment.

The reduction of funeral prices and plans for elimination of unethical practices in their business was the subject of the considerations of a special committee of the Funeral Service Bureau of America at its recent convention. The committee was headed by George Olinger, a prominent Rotarian of Denver, Colorado.

Following the formal opening of the convention Monday evening, with speeches of welcome by Governor Theodore Christensen of Minnesota and Mayor George F. Leach of Minneapolis, and acknowledgment of their greetings by President Sapp, the Minneapolis Club has arranged a picturesque pageant for the mammoth stage of the municipal auditorium.

The story of Rotary and its spread around the world is to be presented in pantomime, an attractive flower garden forming the setting for the Rotary message, translated by the actors and a group of forty-four beautiful girls representing the countries of Rotary.

The keynote of the convention, President Sapp's address Tuesday morning on "Rotary Today and Tomorrow," calls attention to the future tremendous possibilities for good and the increasing influence of Rotary in bringing about better understanding among peoples of the many different countries.

In his welcome to the new member clubs in countries into which Rotary has gone during the past year, President Sapp will be answered by Dr. Cuno, president of the Rotary Club of Hamburg, Germany, which was organized last fall. The general assembly for discussion of the aims and objects of Rotary Tuesday afternoon is under the guidance of Frank L. Mulholland of Toledo, Ohio. Representatives from Spanish and Portuguese speaking nations assemble after this joint meeting to discuss the Rotary problems in their own countries.

The Minneapolis symphony orchestra, under the direction of Henri Verbruggen, together with soloists of international reputation, entertains the visitors Tuesday evening.

Nomination of officers starts the business sessions of the convention on Wednesday morning, followed by a series of short addresses from men of many countries, notably Cuba, Belgium, Chile, Australia, New Zealand, and from widely separated cities in the United States.

Special assemblies continue the program of the Rotarians at work in community service, in twenty or more separate groups Wednesday afternoon. The outstanding social event of the week, the President's ball, is set for Wednesday evening with arrangement for three thousand couples on the huge auditorium floor. Hundreds of Minneapolis society women have pledged their assistance as hostesses.

While balloting for the international officers goes on Thursday morning, the general session of the convention will hear another series of talks on the work of Rotary from representatives of clubs in Norway, Mexico, Great Britain and other countries. Topics related to business ethics, vocation and trade relations, come before the special assemblies of Thursday afternoon.

The resolutions committee has the floor when Friday's session starts, to be followed by reports on Rotary activities in Japan, Canada,

South Africa, Brazil and Czechoslovakia. The report of the election committee on the international officers and the installation of the new leaders of Rotary for the coming year, bring the convention to a close shortly after noon on Friday.

A week of entertainment calculated to keep the memory of Minneapolis long in the minds of the visiting thousands is planned for the convention period by the Minneapolis host committee.

Music, dancing, golf and other entertainment as well as an elaborate water carnival have been arranged to give the Rotarian guests a sample of the delights of a vacation in the land of ten thousand lakes.

St. Olaf's Choir, of St. Olaf's College, Northfield, Minnesota, and the Minneapolis symphony orchestra will give formal concerts for the Rotarian visitors. Both these groups are noted all over the

Much of the good things of life cost much more than they did in 1914: electricity, the shining exception, actually costs no more. This is a record of which the electrical industry is justly proud. It means that you can use electricity

Hon. A. J. Baker returned to his home at San Angelo, Texas, after spending a most enjoyable week with relatives and friends.

We heartily congratulate our young friend, Mr. G. B. Jones, Jr., on his being promoted from ticket agent to cashier of the Y & M. V. Railroad, at Natchez. He is a son of our popular sheriff, Mr. G. B. Jones.

That most excellent lady, Mrs. Will Laycock, and her interesting children left Tuesday for Tazewell, Va. to spend the summer with relatives.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Grenada Building & Saving Association will be held at the Insurance office of J. W. MISSISSIPPI BREVITIES

By Rail Only

Because railway employees pointed out to them the many dollars brought into their city by railroad taxes and payrolls, Purvis merchants have notified out-of-town wholesalers that they will accept no more orders sent in on motor trucks. "You rail route it or we'll rail return it," is their ultimatum.

Milky Baseball

Northeast Mississippians, retaining their love for baseball while they become increasingly crazy about cows, have organized the N. E. Miss. Dairy League. In it are teams from New Albany, Tupelo, Pontotoc, Okolona, Booneville, West Point, Houston.

Keg O' Beer

Under shucks, cobs, and other "matter common to stables," Sheriff Josh Beall of Neshoba county last week found buried a fifty-gallon keg of beer. "A funny place for drinkables," opined Philadelphia stick-whittlers.

Stayed Thirsty

While his deputies raided a Jones county bootlegger's home, Sheriff Freeman, standing in the yard, was accosted by a thirsty would-be customer, asked "How much a pint?" "Three dollars," said the sheriff. "Too much," protested his customer. No sale was made.

Ford vs. Bunny

Dr. C. R. Bush, Macon, will run no more rabbits in his Ford. Accepting last week the challenge of a frisky bunny to a chase down a slippery road, Dr. Bush became so excited in his pursuit that when Brer Rabbit, tired, sought seclusion at the bottom of a 10-foot embankment, he and Ford followed forthwith.

Fried for Firemen

Laurel firemen, having failed in a futile fight to save the million dollar Eastman-Gardner lumber plant, were returning to their trucks Friday night when out from the shadows stepped a black-coated woman, handed one of them a large package, disappeared. In the package firemen found fried chicken, cakes, many dainty dishes.

Make Mates Mind

Asked whether or not a man should whip his wife, Hattiesburg negroes told Judge N. C. Hill that it depends "on how she do." Unconvinced, Judge Hill insisted on a sentence for wife-beater Laurance Hale. Crestfallen blacks left wondering at the ways of whites.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Sentinel is authorized to announce the following as candidates for Congress of the United States from the Fourth Congressional District, subject to the action of the Democratic Primaries in August:

For Congress

(Fourth Congressional District)

JEFF BUSBY, of Chickasaw County
C. H. ALDRIDGE, of Montgomery County.
A. T. PATTERSON, of Calhoun County

AN ELDERLY EDITOR ON STATE CONVENTION.

The following very excellently worded and sensible and conservative editorial appeared in the Kosciusko Star-Herald of June 7, relative to the recent Democratic state convention.

The editorial is from the pen of Hon. Wiley Sanders, now beyond his three score and ten mark. He is an elder in the Baptist church and is a man who stands for what he preaches—the best in morals and in public life. He has had a wide experience in the public life of the state, having served in the state senate and we believe also in the lower house.

"The delegates from Mississippi to the national democratic convention soon to be held at Houston, go uninstructed as to their actions except that they are to vote as a unit.

"This is well, for the effort to instruct them to vote only for a dry candidate would have been equivalent to blocking their action and would have really meant no representation in the convention for Mississippi.

"In the end, by not instructing, it was a victory for Democracy, means that the delegates can hold their heads up and represent a sovereign State.

"Of course, everybody knew that the so-called dries had nothing to offer for their unusual demand. They had no candidate and will not have one, unless he is an independent, and that will simply mean to turn the State over to Perry Howard and his black and tan crew.

"The Star-Herald is free to say that the people who were demanding these instructions were honest, but they must have known that to carry their demands meant defeat to the Democratic party in this state. The defeat of the movement was best for the state and the best for these good people.

"All this talk that the election of a wet Democrat means the death of prohibition is the merest rot. Mississippi is dry and will stay dry regardless of the views of the President. A wet Democrat is preferable to the conditions that now prevail. The Republicans are wet, and they will stay wet, yet the country is dry and the Democratic party has helped make it so. Mississippi never could have been a dry State had it not been for the Democratic party, yet some of these extreme dries threatened to bolt the ticket unless their instructions were obeyed.

"This, the convention refused to do, and if these people want to change from what they claim to be a wet Democrat to a wet Republican party that is also corrupt and has a dark hue, the door is open. This is a free country, but they will make a mistake if they do it.

"Notwithstanding the differences between the two factions, it was a great convention. Although the decks were cleared for action and there was a fight to a finish on every proposition that came up, the utmost good humor prevailed.

"One of the features of the convention was the great speech of Senator Pat Harrison, arraigning the Republican party, and his patriotic plea for harmony. He said we had the best chance in years to elect a Democratic President; that to block the wheels of our delegates by instructions was to murder the Democratic party and if the state was to be turned over to the grafting and South hating Republicans, he did not want to represent it in the United States Senate.

"The convention did right in not instructing for a dry or for Al Smith. Let the delegates go uninstructed and vote for the good of Democracy."

REGARDLESS OF WHO IS PRESIDENT

We are on the threshold of a warm presidential campaign. Much will be said during the contest that it were a thousand times better left unsaid and still much more that will be taken back after the excitement of the contest subsides and better judgment is again enthroned. But bear this in mind: Regardless of who is made president we shall all continue to need to paddle our own canoe. Grenada County and every other county and section of the country will continue to have to meet their individual problems and pay their individual debts. The tree of plenty is not going to drop pearls, diamonds or gold or silver dollars into our laps.

What we of Grenada need to do is to think more about what we can and ought to do as individuals and our duties to our children, our neighbors, our friends and our country. If we will give honest and conscientious attention to these things, we will be real patriots and will be prepared to give intelligent attention to public matters. But neither a Democratic President nor a Republican President is going to solve our individual problems. The country has never yet had a President that did not devote himself sacredly to public duty. With the lights before the country, it is safe to assert that it will not have one during the next four years.

SCHOOL MAN HEADS AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION.

It usually happens that whatever is attempted in behalf of the farmers is waterlogged at the very start by placing those at the helm who belong to some other calling or profession. The legislature created an agricultural commission, and at the first dash out of the box, a school teacher, Prof. Bura Hilbun, is placed at the head of the commission. Mr. Hilbun may know farming from A to Z but for many years he has been devoting himself to other work. In making these observations there is no intention to reflect on Mr. Hilbun, nevertheless it is a well known fact that the farmers, and they have a right to be, are skeptical about the advice of "experts" who never delivered any goods. Too much college stuff on the commission for it to be worth while to the dirt farmer. We are from Missouri and hope we are in error.

Capt. Robert N. Provine of Big Creek, Calhoun County, 88 years of age, a stalwart Baptist and one of the leading and honored citizens of the state, is for Al Smith.

The Jackson Daily News figures out 26 of the 35 delegates Mississippi is sending to Houston as being for Al Smith.

HOOVER REPUBLICAN NOMINEE.

As this is written (Thursday morning) the nomination of Herbert Hoover for President by the Republicans is forecast by all newspaper correspondents. If he is nominated for the highest political office in all the world, it will be but another case of the poor, fatherless boy working his way to the front. Then if the Democrats nominate Al Smith, there will be another candidate whose parents were poor and who came up out of almost the depths of poverty. The country will be safe with either of these men at helm.

The guess at this writing is that the Republicans will again place Dawes at the tail end of their ticket. He is a good one. He is an able, clean and upright, aggressive statesman. "Who will be the Democratic nominee for vice president?" is a current question now. Our guess is first, Jones of Texas, then Pat Harrison, if he will accept it; if not Pat, then Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, or Congressman Hull, of Tennessee.

A NATIONAL BEAR FIGHT.

As this is written, it seems that Hoover will be nominated by the Republicans as that party's candidate for President. Unless all political signs fail and if political figuring is not all lies, Al Smith will be nominated week after next by the Democrats. It will be Herb vs Al, and a bear fight will it be that will make the world stand up and take notice.

Will Rogers says that among the things devoutly prayed for by the minister opening the Republican convention in session at Kansas City was that the Democrats not nominate Al Smith.

And the Ku Klux rises from the boneyard and seeks to hide its skeletons behind the skirts of pure womanhood.

SUPERVISOR AND CITIZENS OBJECT TO 3½ MILL RAISE IN TAX LEVY FOR SCHOOL PURPOSES IN COUNTY

cation to assemble at the court house for the purpose of launching a campaign to levy an additional levy of 3½ mills for school purposes on all the property outside the separate school district of Grenada, it was shown that the county had only 28 white schools but 44 colored schools. The chart prepared for that occasion showed that some of the white schools had less than 5 pupils, some 3 and 4, and one school did not have a single pupil. It was also shown by the chart that 775 white children in the rural districts are attending schools in consolidated districts for which a special levy is made, and which gives them ample school facilities. It was also shown that 398 white children are not attending school in consolidated school districts, but are provided for with a school levy of 1½ mills which has been made for a number of years, thereby giving the children, both white and colored, all the school term that they are able under the circumstances to attend.

On the school chart shown that day it was not shown how many children are attending the 44 negro schools of the county or to what extent the children of the colored schools would be benefitted by the additional raise of 3½ mills. Nor was it stated that the white or colored children living outside of consolidated districts could attend an eight months' school term without serious detriment to their parents.

Had you ever stopped to think of the enormous tax the people of Grenada county are paying and how much we are paying for the public schools?

All during the campaign for governor last year, we were fed on an eight months' school term. From Jackson while the legislature was in session, the news was heralded abroad that the legislature had voted the money to provide an 8-months' school term. Was this bunk? Were the people hoodwinked about an eight months' school term? The legislature did or did not vote an eight months' school term; if it did not, why was it broadcast that it did? It is time for a showing of hands (2)

We have had a levy of 1½ mills for several years for the support of the rural schools.

The Holcomb Consolidated school district is paying a special school tax of 17 mills. The Plant special school district is paying 6 mills. Gore Springs consolidated school district is paying 22½ mills. Wolf-Hardy special district is paying 5 mills. Fair Ground special district is paying 7 mills. Calvary school district is paying 9 mills. Elliott special school district paying 15 mills. To which may be added the 1½ mills that the whole county is paying. Now we are asked to add a levy of 3½ mills, which will be a greater burden than the taxpayers can bear. Would it not be better to consolidate the white schools giving the people the right to raise the school levy or lower it at their pleasure by petition to the board of supervisors? If this levy of 3½ mills is made, it will be unlike a bond issue, it will continue for all time, from year to year, never to be paid off.

Did you know that Grenada county at this time owes EXACTLY $907,250.00 for school bonds and road and bridge bonds? What will the amount be when we pay out of debt? We are paying interest on this amount and will be paying interest on some of it for at least 22 years longer. In the above bonded indebtedness is not included the bonded indebtedness of the city of Grenada which is great.

I was told some time ago by the secretary of the Farm Loan Association of Gore Springs that the people of that district had mortgaged their homes to the Federal government in the sum of $75,000.00. It will be impossible to educate all the people in order that they may never work. For the Lord said unto Adam, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground." We must labor lest we perish from the face of the earth.

The last legislature levied 2 mills for Confederate soldiers, but failed to make an ad valorem levy. This will be done in special session in September. This will be raised, how much we do not know, but we may safely say 8 or 10 mills.

The county must raise the levy in November to meet the growing demands of the people. We need a new courthouse and must have it soon. Some of the iron bridges we are told must be rebuilt soon which adds more tax.

The state appropriation has been greatly increased which will give the children a longer school, perhaps eight months if properly managed. Don't stay away from the polls on June 30, and let this tax levy be carried over your protest. If you oppose it, go to the polls and vote. If you do not go to the polls and the levy carries, don't abuse the board of supervisors for levying the tax and don't abuse the sheriff for collecting it this fall.

The county officials will give you what you want. They will give you extravagance or economy whichever you desire. It would be a piece of folly to say if this levy is defeated, that our people, the country people of Grenada County, do not believe in education. It has been demonstrated time and time again that they do. We believe in giving our children a better education than we have. We believe in better schools, better school management and better results for our money. Yes, we believe in all this, but we do not believe in a waste of funds.

Shall we, ostrich like, hide our faces in the sand and refuse to see conditions that surround us? If we see conditions as they are, and then refuse to profit by what we see, are we not acting even more unwisely than the foolish Virgins? We know that crop conditions are not only not encouraging but on the contrary discouraging. From present crop prospects, there will not be enough cotton made in Grenada County to pay the entire taxes of the county. We will be right back where we were in 1920, only worse off because we owe more. The resources of the farm property of the county are decreasing. There is practically but little timber now in the county—it has been sold.

Men and women of the country districts of Grenada County, let's wake up and go to the polls on June 30 and defeat this tax burden which it is proposed to put on us in post haste. You know personally what you are able to pay—the proposition won't do; we are already mortgaged to the hilt, and another bond issue means in plain terms another mortgage on the property of the county.

Very respectfully,
J. M. COOLEY,
F. T. COOLEY,

MISS. SUPREME COURT AFFIRMS LOCAL CASES

Act; the verdict in this case should serve as a lesson to others. It is no uncommon thing to hear it said, especially of the towns, that "everybody is making home brew." A suggestion of error was filed in the Schultz case and must be passed upon by the supreme court before the matter is finally settled. The arrest in this case was made by Hon. E. S. Chapman, prohibition commissioner, assisted by R. M. Wood, constable. The prosecution was directed largely by Mr. Chapman.

Walter Schultz is an expert machinist, and is regarded by many as one of the best in all the country. He evidently had the confidence of his employers for the reason that for years he was in the employ of the Ayer & Lord Tire Co. He also served several terms as a member of the city council of Grenada before his removal to the country where he was residing at the time these charges were made against him.

The sentence of the court was a fine of $250.00 each on Mr. and Mrs. Schultz, and a jail sentence of 30 days each.

YOUNG MINISTER DIES FROM WRECK INJURIES

beside of the young man almost every spare moment since it was known that his condition was critical.

Fate deals with uncertain hands. Hard is its decrees, it seems, in many instances. So many thousand things of life are mysteries and will be until time shall end. But notwithstanding this young man in his last hours was among those he had never seen before, he was soon made to understand that he was among friends and those bound to him by the ties of Christian brotherhood. The good mother did not want for that sympathy and comfort that a bleeding heart always yearns for.

The young minister was aware of his condition and said from the beginning that he could not survive. He talked of the future and blessed the name of the Master. It is a wonderful and holy thing to so live that when the sands of life begin to ebb away, one feels that the heavenly angels come and stand by his bedside and that they are there ready to introduce him into the beautiful beyond.

many bills sent to the Claims Committee of the Senate, Stephens probably has had a better opportunity, as have other members of that body, to accomplish a great work in the Senate.

During the last session of Congress, Stephens reported out thirty-one bills for the Claims Committee. According to the number of members of the committee, the Mississippian should not have reported but thirteen bills from that committee in order to report an average number, but because of his diligence and desire to do his part of the work of the committee, he reported more measures than any other fourteen members of the committee.

WEATHER UNFAVORABLE TO SOUTHERN FARMERS

much of the adjacent lands is overflooded. Much land along the banks of the river that is under cultivation is under water. The continued rains have served to make the cool weather last. There has been no really cotton growing weather thus far. Crops of both corn and cotton are late. The farmers have not failed to utilize every hour that they could work, and up to June 10 crops were practically clean. But "General Green" as the old time darkey used to say, has been awfully busy since June first. There is much grass in many fields, but if working weather can be had for ten days, the grass will fall below the hoes and the plows and cotton and corn will be given every chance to do all the soil can give forth.

GRENADA GOLFERS WIN

The first of a series of tournaments between members of the Grenada Golf Club and players from other North Mississippi towns was held Thursday afternoon, June 7, when 18 players from the Sardis club met Grenada in a match on the local links. The majority of the towns in this section enjoy a half-holiday every Thursday and it is planned to have these matches every week; in first one town and then another.

The play was eighteen holes, best ball matches, composed of nine foursomes. Grenada easily took seven out of the nine, the two being lost only by a narrow margin.

Results in the order of teeing off were as follows:

R. C. Trusty and C. B. Huggins, of Grenada, defeated T. O. Hunter and J. H. Cash, of Sardis, 4 and 2;
H. J. Guidry and C. K. Bailey, Grenada, beat E. D. Taylor and D. S. Irby, Sardis, 5 and 4;
R. D. Swango and H. G. Short, won over R. B. Townes and R. D. Sharp, Grenada, 3 and 2;

JOHN JAMES HOWARD SAYS HE IS AN INNOCENT MAN

To the people and my friends of Grenada County:

I feel that I must say to the public that I know that I have not lived as true a life as I should have but I have never had a bill on me before any grand jury. I want the world to know that the people who testified against me, or at least the Thomas boys and the Grams, I did not know such people were in the world. I had never met them and what they told me was absolutely false.

I am going to Parchman, an innocent man. But I realize I made a mistake when I took some one else's advice and didn't put my witnesses on, but I can truthfully say that I was at the picture show at Charleston with my family and when it was over I went home and went to bed on the night that the fire occurred at Holcomb.

To the people who are rejoicing over my going, I wish you would please consider my wife and family. I have always tried to do the best by them I could and they are going to miss their old dad and I certainly am going to miss my dear family, but I hope and trust to God that I will soon be back home with my loved ones and I will show to the world that I am a man.

Respectfully,
JOHN JAMES HOWARD.
Grenada, Miss., June 14, 1928.

OLD CITIZEN OF HOLCOMB COMMUNITY PASSES

On Friday night of last week W. C. Mullen of near Holcomb, passed to his reward after a long and worthy life. Mr. Mullen had been in a low state of health for several years. Time and age told the old, old story of physical being and despite all that was done for him, he succumbed to the inevitable. He came to this county from Carroll County many years ago. He was known for his probity, his integrity and for keeping his word and obligation in all matters. Many years ago he became a member of the Methodist church. He believed in his church. He had faith in the Christian ministry. He lent his influence for the betterment of the community. He provided well for those of his own household. His was one of the few remaining homes of the county who preserved those habits and traditions of the South as to tables laden with the best that a frugal home and farm could provide. He was delighted to have his friends and acquaintances under his own roof. He was a good husband, an obliging neighbor, a faithful churchman and an honest and upright man.

The funeral services were held at Sparta church Saturday by the pastor of that circuit, the Rev. Wood, after which his remains were laid to rest for that Eternal day about which man knoweth not. He is survived by his wife, three sons, Eddie, Marvin and Amize Mullen of Holcomb, and two daughters, Mrs. Chink Clark, of Holcomb, and Mrs. Hulda Fielder, of Memphis to whom The Sentinel tenders sincere sympathy.

STATE SUPERINTENDENT TO MAKE TWO ADDRESSES

Hon. W. F. Bond, state superintendent of education, will address the community meeting at Holcomb and the patrons and taxpayers of the Holcomb consolidated school district Friday evening, June 15th, at 8 o'clock in the high school auditorium. Everyone is invited to be present and hear him. Saturday, June 16th, at 10 a. m. at the court house, Mr. Bond will address the trustees and patrons of the other sections of the county relative to better schools. It is hoped that every patron and the trustees of all the schools will be present on Saturday to hear him.

STOLEN CAR TRAIL LEADS OFFICERS TO THREE STATES

After a chase which lasted three days and carried them into three states, J. H. Dogan and F. S. Nason, sheriff of Tallahatchie and Grenada counties, respectively, arrested Bill Thomas and George Whitten last Friday afternoon in Parkin, Ark. on the charge of automobile stealing. They were brought back to Grenada Friday night and lodged in jail here to be turned over to Washington county authorities where the theft was committed.

Sheriff Nason was summoned early Wednesday morning, June 6, to the Osberry community of Grenada county, 15 miles west of Grenada, where the store of Staten Bros. had been entered the night before and some $250 in merchandise was stolen. The trail of the thieves was picked up at the store and was followed to where the goods were loaded into an automobile. Clues were followed all day long and when the sheriff saw Thomas and Whitten coming from the lake bottoms in the western portion of the county, he immediately began to suspicion them. Since both of these men reside in Tallahatchie county and were evidently headed for their native surroundings the sheriff of that county was called into the chase.

In the meantime Sheriff Nason had been notified by Washington county authorities to arrest Thomas and Whitten on the car stealing charge. He and Sheriff Dogan renewed the chase which led them to Bolivar county, from there to Memphis and then into Arkansas. At each place they were just a few hours behind Thomas and Whitten and finally they captured them in Parkin.

Thomas is a first cousin of the six Thomas brothers who were sent to prison a few months ago from Tallahatchie and Grenada counties. At that time he was one of those who asked that a statement be prepared for the newspapers distinguishing between the "Thomasases" so that his side of the family would not be reflected upon in newspaper articles about the six who were sent to the penitentiary. Sheriff Nason states that the two men have admitted guilt on the car stealing charge but the sheriff is inclined to believe that the two were not implicated in the store robbery.

Daughters of Mrs. Obenchain

A few days ago Miss Jeanette B. Obenchain and Mrs. Maud T. Abenchain of Chicago stopped over for a couple of days in Grenada on a return trip from Florida where they had made a brief visit. Miss Jeanette holds a doctor's degree and is a member of the faculty of Chicago University, a distinction that her sister had to make known and when she heard her sister speak of her as "Doctor" she was modestly said, "I am only down as that among the faculty and students of the University". These ladies were born in Grenada, being daughters of Mrs. Ann L. Obenchain and granddaughters of Col. and Mrs. A. S. Brown. They will be recalled by many that a very few years ago, Mrs. Obenchain owned quite a deal of real estate just beyond the southern limits of the town which she had many times declined to sell. This property was also a part of the A. S. Brown estate, which in the later years was spoken of as being only the residence and the farm now owned by Mrs. C. C. Province. The now Province residence was the Brown residence, at one time one of the most palatial homes in the south. The front gate posts were two brass lions of immense proportions and these granddaughters stated that these lions were purchased in France and that they were under the impression that one of them had been donated to some educational or public enterprise of some sort in one of the great cities. Col. Brown first came to Mississippi and settled in the vicinity of Natchez. After a few years he discovered of his property there and came to Grenada where he lived for many years, or maybe until his death. The Brown plantation was widely known throughout the country. An almost equally notable residence was that of Col. Payne, now the celebrated Borden property.

Miss Obenchain and Mrs. Abenchain while here leisurely strolled about the town. Had it generally been known that they were here and just who they are, many additional courtesies would have been extended them. They were taken car riding by several and those who had the pleasure of meeting them enjoyed them greatly. They have not forgotten that they are southerners by birth. Chicago and its life have not changed their southern viewpoint. They referred to what some ladies insisted should be done in one of the big clubs of Chicago recently and that was that there ought to be some way on an election ticket to tell who is not white. This, these two ladies said, amused them very much and they said that they could not resist the opportunity to pleasantly taunt their club members with the fact that somewhere beside the south "there was a race problem".

In passing the Methodist church in Grenada, the visitors stated that that was the church in which their mother held her membership. They were especially complimentary of the beauty and attractiveness of Grenada and manifested almost a hallowed interest in many things about the town and its surroundings.

These visitors' left most pleasant impressions with all who met them. They show that demureness, gentleness and graciousness which are woman's greatest adornments. Mrs. Abenchain just somehow left the impression with a representative of The Sentinel that it might happen that she and her husband would want a home in Grenada. They have a son just a little beyond his majority and only recently out of college, and they are thinking, she stated, of getting him out of the swirl of life in a great city. Their address is 6743 Merrill Avenue, Chicago.

Talbert-Finnell Marriage is Announced.
Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wimberly Oliver, announce the marriage of their daughter, Lurline Oliver Finnell, to Jerry T. Talbert, of Asheville, N. C., the wedding having been solemnized Wednesday morning, June 6, at 10 o'clock, Birmingham, Ala.

The nuptial ceremony was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents where a profusion of sweet peas, daisies and other blossoms of the season were arranged in the living and dining rooms.

Dr. J. R. Hobbs, pastor of the First Baptist Church, read the vows in the presence of the immediate families.

Mr. and Mrs. Talbert left immediately for a motor trip through Mississippi and Tennessee and later will be at home in Asheville, N. C., where the former is connected with the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company of that city.

The above is taken from the columns of the Birmingham Age-Herald. Mr. and Mrs. Talbert reached Grenada Saturday and while here were guests of Mr. Talbert's sister, Mrs. Claude Parker, at the old family home just south of town. The couple were showered with congratulations and good wishes. Mr. Talbert was reared in Grenada. For quite a while he was assistant postmaster and later postmaster. He resigned at Asheville, N. C., where he accepted a place with the bank named above, a place he still holds except that his responsibilities have been greatly enlarged. Mrs. Talbert is a gracious, attractive and lovely woman and little wonder is felt that Mr. Talbert fell victim to her charms. Mr. and Mrs. Talbert return trip Tuesday. The Sentinel tenders congratulations and hopes for Mr. and Mrs. Talbert a smooth voyage through life.

"A bevy of charming young ladies girlhood friends of Miss Katherine Simpson enjoyed a bridge party at the honoree's home. The occasion was the announcement of Miss Katherine's engagement to Mr. Archie Knox Miller of Memphis. The wedding is to take place at the Presbyterian church on June 23. The home was decorated in a beautiful effect with pink rambler roses and gorgeous sweet peas in abundance. Miss Katherine Simpson was lovely in an orchid georgette dress."

The above is taken from the social columns of the Oxford Eagle of June 7, and will no doubt be read with interest by Miss Simpson's friends and relatives in Grenada where she was born.

ABERDEEN EXAMINER ON STATE CONVENTION

It was the most memorable assembly of the Democratic hosts since the days of reconstruction and the carpetbagger. The same courageous and determined spirit which impelled the Democracy of 1876 to drive from our soil the alien horde from the North which buzzard-like was tearing at the vitals of the South while she was prostrate and helpless, brooded over that convention at Jackson a few days ago.

We say it with shame that some three or four organizations in our state fell in with their plan, either knowingly or unwittingly, and it took courage to stand up for Democracy when these organizations packed the hotels of Jackson so that accredited delegates could not even find a place to lay their head, marching around the convention halls with their banners, interfering with orderly procedure of the convention by their ill-timed cheers and applause when some speaker was making a stab at the heart of Democracy. Our contempt grew for these time-serving politicians with which our state is afflicted as one after another they came to the platform and tried to temporize with these elements, afraid to call their soul their own.

And these little two-bit, whiffling, political preachers who left the work of the Lord that they were paid to do, to engage in partisan politics, and attempt to deliver the Democratic party, bag and baggage, over to the G. O. P., the party that regards the South as a Vassal state, and has plundered and pillaged our land without let or hindrance, they had their reward down there, too. The convention listened patiently to one of them for a while, but when he got too vile, they hooted him off the platform. A certain other high official of the state was given a dose of the same medicine.

Hurrah for the untiered Democracy of Mississippi that has run the gauntlet of these various organizations and has fearlessly enlisted under the banner of the party of Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson and Woodrow Wilson!—Aberdeen Examiner.

Some of the boys are sick and some are away from town. We had seventeen present. Mr. McLeod put us through some exercises and drills while Mr. Horton attended to getting the eats ready for us.

Mr. B. J. Anderson paid for the lunch this week and we sure thank him too.

Harry Rayburn, the regular reporter, is sick this week.

ROTARIANS HEAR REPORTS OF YEAR'S DAIRYING WORK

At its meeting Tuesday, June 12, the Grenada Rotary Club heard reports from various members of the Grenada County Farm Development Association about the work that has been done by the organization since its inception. A. N. Rayburn read an extensive report of loans made, giving the names of the borrowers and the amount borrowed. With but few exceptions all of these notes show various amounts credited on their payment and some of them have been paid in full, Mr. Rayburn said.

W. E. Jackson read the list of those who were contributing toward the association for the coming twelve months and the amounts each promised to pay. He also called off the names of those who had not yet been seen by the committees and who are to be called upon.

J. T. Thomas reviewed the work of the past year, giving the amount of the various contributions, showing what had been spent and what it was expended for. He stated that the association, he felt, was making greater progress now than ever before and he urged that it be giving the wholehearted support of the community.

Because of lack of time Rev. R. L. McLeod was prevented from giving a further account of his trip to the holy lands but it is understood that he will be on the program for next week.

Mr. Crawford, of Little Rock, Rock, Ark., was a guest at the luncheon.

world for the excellence of their musical standards.

The choir program, on Sunday afternoon, is arranged as a sacred concert, while the orchestra has been given the entire Tuesday evening time of the convention.

In process of development now is an elaborate pageant for Monday evening, depicting in pantomime, with dancers, music and beautiful stage settings, the growth and spread of Rotary around the world. The scene is a flower garden, with forty-four girls, representing all of the countries included in Rotary, to portray the theme, and special music accompanying the stage lines.

The annual president's ball on Wednesday evening, a formal dance, is featured by two orchestras to provide almost constant music, for both the older and the newer dance steps. The ladies of Rotary have interested hundreds of Minneapolis society women in acting as hostesses for the visitors for this event. Preparations have been made for more than three thousand couples.

A carnival spirit has been fostered for the Thursday night entertainment, starting with special dinners at the leading hotels. A caravan of four thousand automobiles is being organized to take the Rotarians on a drive to Lake Calhoun for a water spectacle of shell races, outboard motor races, fireworks and music. Orchestras at the downtown hotels will be on hand later for those ready to continue the carnival up to midnight.

Typical of the hospitality of the city, when the international character of the Rotary convention was brought to the attention of the citizens, has been the response of the individual, ready to offer his automobile for the convenience and entertainment of the city's 10,000 guests.

Social events for the visiting women have been arranged for each afternoon of the week, country club visits, tea at the statehouse with Governor and Mrs. Christian, a trip to Lake Minneapolis, and other entertainment.

The governor's tea is preceded by a trip along the River Drive to Minnehaha Falls, made famous by Longfellow's beautiful poem, and through other scenes in the most beautiful spots of the Twin Cities.

Nearly three miles of flower boxes have been arranged to line the front of business houses along the city's principal thoroughfares, with flags of all the nations displayed in the windows.

Much as worthy friends add to the happiness and value of life we must in the main depend upon ourselves, and every one is his own best friend, or worst enemy.—Lord Avelery.

IT LOOKS LIKE AL SMITH

With a few Catholics at the back of them and a handful of "wets" at the side of them, the Catholic and wet adherents of the Mississippi State Democratic Convention were able to rout the Protestant and prohibition forces and send an unopposed delegation to the National Democratic Convention to be held in Houston, Texas, this month. It was a distinct victory for Al Smith, the wet candidate for President and looks like it means his selection as the nominee. Let us hope not, for Mississippi is largely dry and will not vote, many of them for Al Smith for President. His nomination would seriously jeopardize the survival of the Democratic party in many parts of the Union.—Aberdeen Weekly.

CHRYSLER, DODGE OFFICIALS OUTLINE FUTURE POLICIES

Acquisition of Dodge Brothers, Inc., by the Chrysler corporation now awaiting approval of the stockholders will not affect the identity or products of either company, according to statements just released by officials of the two corporations. The products of the two manufacturers will continue without interruption.

Dodge Brothers will continue to be Dodge Brothers and Chrysler will be Chrysler, says the statement, and the sales organization will be unrelated except as they shall mutually share in the advantages of the consolidation. Their cars will continue to be produced and marketed independently. The statement continues:

"The widespread public interest in recent events affecting the Chrysler corporation and Dodge Brothers, Inc., deserves an authentic and official statement, and an assurance regarding the future of these two corporations.

"Each will benefit from the consummation of a plan which unites such tremendous resources in materials, manufacturing facilities, financial power and manufacturing genius.

"Both the public and the dealers may look forward to the greater benefits which the consolidation of such tremendous resources will produce, and the men identified with these businesses may be assured of a stable and definite future, inspired by the progressive business which has been responsible for this uniting of two great companies."

PRICE FOR HIGH TESTING MILK

Have you any definite figures as to the cost of producing Jersey or Guernsey milk as compared to Holstein milk? I will be selling Grade A milk wholesale, at an approximate price of $3.46 per hundred for 3.7% milk, with an additional price of about five cents per hundred for each one-tenth per cent increase in fat test.

West Swaney, N. H. T. J. F. There is no recent data giving any reliable information as to the relative cost of producing milk under different tests, although it is generally conceded that it costs more per hundred pounds to produce high testing milk than it does low testing milk.

About eighteen years ago the Wisconsin College of Agriculture operated what was known as a dairy cow competition. It secured 158 records on Holsteins, 157 on Guernseys, and 83 on Jerseys. In this particular competition the Holsteins produced 100 lbs. of milk testing 3.42% at a cost for feed of 72 cents. The Guernseys averaged a cost of 84 cents for 100 lbs. of milk testing 4.98%, and the Jerseys produced 100 lbs. of 5.16% milk for slightly over 76 cents. It is quite possible that enough cows are not included in this to make an accurate breed comparison, particularly as the same average quality of cows may not have been entered for each of the three breeds.

In our issue for November 25, 1927, appears a table compiled by Professor Gaines of Illinois that shows the price differential per point test that should be allowed to cover the difference between the cost of producing high and low testing milk. If the base price per hundred for 3.5 per cent milk is $3.00, a dairyman producing higher testing milk should receive according to this table 4.87 cents per point test to compensate him for his increased cost.

Computations from this same table show that when $3.46 is the base price per hundred for milk testing 3.7 per cent, the price differential per point test should be 5.5 cents. If 4.7 per cent milk is produced, the dairyman should re-

NERVES Went to Pieces

"I suffered a long time, before I tried Cardui," says Mrs. Lillie Pruitt, 130 "K" St., Anderson, S. C.

"I was badly run-down in health. My nerves 'went to pieces', and I had to go to bed.

"I got so bad off, I could not bear to have anybody walk across the floor of my room. The least little thing upset me. Sometimes I became hysterical. I had bad pains in my back and sides, and my head and limbs would take spells of aching, which almost set me wild.

"One day I saw where a woman, who had a trouble like my own, had been relieved by Cardui. I decided at once to try it. It began to help me from the very first. I took Cardui regularly, for several months, and my improvement was so remarkable my family and friends were delighted." Try Cardui for your troubles. At all drug stores.

ceive $4.01 a hundred ($3.46 + $.55), if he is to receive the cost of producing the higher testing milk. In the same manner, if his milk tests only 3.3 per cent he should receive $3.24 ($3.46 - $.22), if payment is to be made on the basis of the relative cost of producing milk of different tests.

If one is required to produce milk testing not less than 3.7%, it will be necessary to add either Guernseys or Jerseys to a herd of Holsteins in order to secure this test. Other things being equal, we would suggest that it will be safer to rely upon Holsteins as the basis of economic milk production and then add Jerseys or Guernseys in sufficient numbers to raise the total milk to the required test. The allowance of 5 cents per point for tests above 3.7% is scarcely sufficient to warrant one in producing a combined milk that will test much above the 3.7% basis.—Hoard's Dairyman.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. P. B. Fitzwater, D. D.
Dean, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago
(Ed. 1928, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for June 17 THE CRUCIFIXION

LESSON TEXT—Mark 15:16-47.
GOLDEN TEXT—God Commend-eth His own love toward us, in that,
while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Died for Us.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Christ Died for Our Sins.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR
TOPIC—Why Jesus Chose the Cross.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT
TOPIC—The Meaning of the Cross.

1. Jesus Crowned with Thorns
(vv. 16-20).

After Pilate had scourged Jesus
he delivered Him to be crucified.
1. The crown of thorns (vv.
16, 17).

Knowing that Jesus had been condemned for claiming to be Israel's king they clothed Him with purple and crowned Him with a wreath of thorns. The crown of thorns typified the curse which He bore for man's sin (Gal. 3:17, 18).

2. The salutation (v. 18).
They said, "Hail King of the Jews." This they did in derision.
3. Their mock worship (vv.
19, 20).

They smote Him on the head with a reed, taunted Him and went through a performance of mock worship.

1. Jesus Crucified (vv. 21-41).
1. They led Him away to the place of crucifixion (vv. 21-23).

At first they compelled Him to bear His own cross, but when physical weakness made this impossible, they compelled Simon, the Cyrenian, to bear it for Him. It is beautiful to note that the son of this Cyrenian came to believe on Jesus (cf. Rom.
16:13). In all probability his being compelled to bear the cross was the means of his own salvation.

Christ's face was so marked by the thorns and cruel blows that
"there was no form or comeliness"
(Isa. 53:2). All this He endured for us. He drank this bitter cup to the dregs, but refused to drink
"the wine mingled with myrrh," which would have deadened his pain.

2. Gambling for the clothing of the Lord (vv. 24, 25).

Having nailed Him to the cross
they gambled for the seamless robe under the very cross on which He was dying and in their heartless cruelty they sat down to watch Him die (Matt. 27:35).

3. The superscription (v. 26).
It was customary to place over the victim on the cross the name and crime of the offender. Though Pilate did this in mockery to vex the Jews, the title was absolutely true. He was indeed their king.

4. Between two thieves (vv.
27, 28).
This added to His shame. His identification with the two robbers was the fulfillment of the Scripture
"and he was numbered with the transgressors" (Isa. 53:12).

5. The dying Savior reviled (vv.
29-32).
This reviling was engaged in by the passersby, the chief priests and the thieves who were crucified with Him. In this nameless agony and shame they taunted Him by bidding Him come down from the cross, de-risionally saying, "He saved others, Himself He cannot save." He could not save Himself and others,
so He chose to die to save others.

6. Darkness upon the land (v. 33).
This was at noonday. So shocking was this crime that nature threw around the Son of God a shroud to hide Him from the gaze of the godless company.

7. The cry from the cross (vv.
34-36).
When God laid upon Christ, His Beloved Son, the world's sin and turned His face from Him, there went out the awful cry of anguish,
"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

8. He dismissed His Spirit (v. 37).
When the price of our redemption was fully paid, Jesus dismissed His spirit. No one took His life away from Him. He gave it up.

9. The rent veil (v. 38).
This symbolized the giving up of
His life (Heb. 10:20).

10. The Centurion's confession
(v. 39).
He said, "Truly this man was the Son of God."

11. The lingering group of women
(vv. 40, 41).
They who had lovingly ministered to Him in life were waiting to see where they could bury His precious body.

12. Jesus' burial (vv. 42-47).
Loving hands now took the precious body and laid it in Joseph's new tomb. This man, who did not consent to the foul treatment of the Lord, now risked his reputation and by his action makes a bold confession of the Lord.

SMITH SENTIMENT

This writer, who attended the state convention in Jackson on Tuesday, was, like many other delegates, very much surprised to see the sentiment in favor of the nomination of Governor Al Smith.

We had thought all along that Mississippi could be numbered among the states in which his support amounted to little or nothing, but such is not the case, and so we are convinced that nothing but a hard fight will prevent his nomination at Houston.—Wood-

APPEALS FOR ORPHANS

To The Baptist People of Mississippi:

Our denomination has allowed their orphanage at Jackson, through failure to contribute sufficient funds for the support of the children and maintenance and proper upkeep of the property, to get into bad shape. If you do not think so and do not want it to stay that way, get busy and inform yourself at once.

An effort is being made this month to raise $50,000.00 among the Baptists of the State to put the property into proper shape. No one is asked to donate over $100-00. At least half of this money must be raised from $100.00 people.
If you cannot afford to give that much, then do your very best.

I have been busy on this matter for five weeks and my reason for putting out this letter is because I find so few others working, thinking or even knowing about the movement.

I appeal to every Baptist preacher in Mississippi to get busy at once, talking, organizing and having his people pay. Also to every man who has been named as a captain of his association; also to every deacon who is awake any part of his time; as well as to every Baptist who wants to help properly take care of this crowd of helpless people.

This fund is independent of the budget but has the approval of the Executive Committee of our State Convention Board. This is a permanent improvement fund and not one of current expense, but each church gets credit for what is sent through it as a special donation to the orphans. All checks should be made payable to R. B. Gunter, Secretary, Jackson, Miss., and designated for this fund.

I have no children or relatives in the home myself and hope I will never have, but as a member of the Board of Trustees and one who knows how badly this institution

The Ward of Robbers' Roost

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Possessing characteristics that have earned him the nickname "Go Ahead," George Morrison, Virginia, is the recipient of a communication (intended for his father, who is in the East) from Tom "Fair," asking the senior Morrison, for sake of old friendship, to send some one to rescue his foster daughter, Stella, a relative of the Mortons, from a band of outlaws of whom "Fair" is the leader. "Fair" himself cannot bring her out, being watched by an enemy whom he designates only as "Jim." In the absence of his father, Go Ahead decides to go for Stella. As a cowboy, but with credentials as an official of the United States Secret Service, he leaves for Loboville, the place designated, with a colored attendant, Caesar.

CHAPTER II.—At "Robbers' Roost," the outlaws stronghold, Fair explains the situation to Stella. The girl, eighteen years old, does not want to leave her adopted father or give up the life she has led, more like a boy than a girl.

CHAPTER III.—Fair, at Jim Barker's direction (the "Jim" Barker had referred to, and the sheriff of the county sends a gang to run a shipment of rifles and ammunition into Mexico and return with a consignment of whisky. He puts a man, Wade, whom he knows is his enemy, in charge. Unknown to Fair, Stella, with Wade's connivance, rides, with the whisky runners. Fair's messenger returns with the news that Go Ahead is on his way.

CHAPTER IV.—The bandits' errand is successful, and the party brings up at Barker's ranch. There Wade refuses to let Stella return to Robbers' Roost, making a proposal of marriage, which the girl refuses. Wade declares he will force her to marry him, and threatens to attack her. They struggle.

CHAPTER V.—Go Ahead comes on the scene, witnesses the struggle and overcomes Wade. He has no suspicion of Stella's sex. She tells him her name is "Bob." According to arrangements with Wade, Barker appears and is also disarmed by Go Ahead. A Portuguese cowboy, Diego, fires at Morton, and "Bob" escapes, to follow the gang to Robbers' Roost. Go Ahead also gets away and goes after the girl.

CHAPTER VI.—Stella overtakes the outlaws, her arrival astonishing them in the plot, but they say nothing. Jack Green joins them and learns from Stella of Go Ahead's presence at the ranch. He tells her who her rescuer is. Stella decides to return and rejoin Go Ahead. She is pursued. Go Ahead intercepts her.

Long before he had become convinced that Bob had been a member of the bandit gang, but he was also convinced that the boy had definitely broken with it and would probably be willing to talk about it more or less freely. Go Ahead had no intention of breaking the pact that he had made with Fair through Jack Green, either in letter or in spirit, but he did want to know how things had gone at Robbers' Roost since Green had left a month or more before, and particularly he wanted information about his Cousin Stella.

So he began, "Bob," he asked, rather startlingly, "you know Fair's foster daughter, don't you?"

Stella jumped, far more noticeably than she had when the bullets had begun to whiz past her. "You mean Stella?" she gasped.

"Yes, of course. You must know her."

Stella gasped again, but not because of Go Ahead's assumption that she was familiar with the affairs of the Robbers' Roost gang. In fact, it never occurred to her that he was supposed not to know. It was merely the abruptness of the question that took her aback.

But she answered promptly; it never took Stella long to recover herself. "Yes, I know her," she admitted. "But I didn't know you did."

"I don't. But I'm interested in her all the same. I've heard a good deal about her, first and last, and I'd like to hear more. What sort of a girl is she?"

Scornfully Stella shrugged her shoulders. "Never thought of her as a girl," she sniffed. "She dresses like a boy and acts like a boy and swears like a boy. And she's a lot tougher than most boys." Out of the corners of her eyes Stella watched the effect of her words.

They were not what she had expected. Go Ahead did not look at all surprised or taken aback. "Poor child," he murmured. "Poor child."

Suddenly Stella found herself furiously angry. Like a little tigress she turned on Go Ahead. "You'd better not let her hear you call her that," she grated. "She's a darned lot better than your Eastern girls that can't do anything but flirt and polish their fingernails."

Go Ahead glanced at the angry youngster and laughed delightedly. "I beg your pardon, Bob," he said. "I hadn't the least intention of offending you or her. I was only thinking how much she'd lost."

"Humph. Ever think how much she's had?" Stella's anger was fading but it was not yet gone.

"Eh? . . . By George, that's an idea. No, I hadn't thought of that. Now that you suggest it, I guess she's had a lot of things that a lot of girls would give a lot to have had. I don't doubt that she's enjoyed her life. She must have enjoyed it if she didn't hate it."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, she's led a boy's life, as you said. Some girls like that just as most boys do. But those that don't like it usually hate it, especially when they begin to be grown up. Stella's eighteen, isn't she?"

"Maybe."

"Well, we're all Father Adam's children when we're young. Boys and girls alike. We're all like to run and about and kick our legs. But after a while we begin to change."

and part of us discover that they're Eve's daughters. Then they want another life, unless, as I say, they're really boys at heart. Then they love it. If Stella does—"

"She does." "That's what I understood. That's why I said 'poor child.' You see, Bob, we can't stay eighteen or twenty-one forever. We grow up, and these man-girls have a dreadful time when they have to shift their views. I guess Adam was a hunter and a farmer all his life, and his sons take after him. But I'll bet that Eve got mighty tired of the hunting game sooner or later and longed for a home where she could bring up little Cain and Abel, and her daughters sooner or later take after her—thank God."

"I don't know what your driving at," Stella's tones were cold. "No? I thought you would. Stella will get tired of the life she's leading. Probably she'll realize all in a minute that she's sic to death of it and that she wants to lead a real girl's life. And then, when she tries to lead it, she's very likely to discover that she isn't fitted for it. She won't want to go back to the old life and she won't be satisfied with the new one. Of course, it might be different if she met some one whom she loved and who really loved her—like you—"

"Like me!" An emotion that might have been rage shook Stella from head to foot. "Me love Stella Fair? Me! You—you—Oh—!" But she choked and became inarticulate.

"Good Heavens!" Go Ahead stared in utter astonishment. "What the devil! Look here, old man, you must have misunderstood me. Forget it; I'm liable to shoot off my mouth too much when I get somebody at my mercy." Go Ahead reached out his arm, as a touch of his bride sent his horse crashing against Stella's and passed it over her shoulders. "There, there, boy. Don't hold it against me, whatever it was. I like you. I never met a boy I liked so much."

CHAPTER VII.—This was Green's plan. Stella knew nothing of it. "Yes, I don't know how long it'll take—no long, I guess. And I'd be mighty glad if you could stick around till I get her and then go East with me and her. You—you'll be a big man some day if you'll come."

Stella bowed her head over her horse's neck. "No," she murmured. "I'll never be a big man. But I'll stick around till you're ready, all the same."

CHAPTER VIII.—The chase by the bandits had followed an irregular course, leading at first southwest, then west, then south, with the result that some two hours after Go Ahead and Stella had shaken off their pursuers they found themselves at the crest of the last swell of the series that rose to the hills behind them.

Here in the scant shadow of two or three mesquite bushes that helped to hide them from possible foes Go Ahead halted his party, ostensibly to give the prisoners a rest but actually to give Barker as much time as possible to get back to town.

"I'd like to surprise J. B. as much as I can, Bob," he explained, "and I can't do it if I get to his town first, for somebody's sure to tell him I'm there before I see him. Rush a man off his feet is a pretty good rule to go by. So we'll wait and let him get in if he's going to do it."

Stella wrinkled her brows doubtfully. "What makes you think he's going there today?" she asked. "More likely he's still hunting for you, and he wouldn't expect you at Loboville. He'd know I'd warn you away from there, and he'd look somewhere else."

"That's the way I figured it out. Barker's likely to send his men back to his ranch with orders to watch out for us and send him word—"

"He can telephone. He's got a phone at the ranch."

"All right! To telephone him if we show up there. Then he'd arrange with Wade to scour the hills to the north for us, and he'd probably go back to Loboville to fix things there. It's a gamble what he'll do; but shucks, life's full of gambles."

Stella admitted it and relapsed into silence. She was rather tired, not so much from the work she had done, though she had been up nearly all night before, as from the nervous strain of the day.

Go Ahead, however, knew nothing of the gun and whisky running and did not realize how tired he must be. So he harked back to the old subject and asked for further information about Stella.

"Is Stella pretty?" he asked. Stella frowned. "Oh, she's got the usual number of teeth, and she's got good hair—if she'd let it grow," she answered. "But she won't let it grow—or she can't. She—Oh, she just looks like a lanky boy. You'd never think that she was a girl."

Unreservedly Go Ahead laughed. "Oh, wouldn't I, though," he retorted. "No girl in boys' clothes could ever get by my eagle eyes. You wait and see."

Stella sniffed. "All right," she promised. "I'll wait and see!" Then her strong white teeth clicked sharply. Go Ahead's boast settled it, she told herself. Not for the world would she tell him who she was until she had taught him a lesson.

A moment later she looked up to the arch of the sky. "Most time to go, isn't it?" she asked. "High time," Go Ahead got to his feet. "Come on, boys," he called to his prisoners. "I know it's tough but cheer up; in a couple of hours you'll be resting peacefully in a nice cool jail in charge of Sheriff Barker."

The two men, who had been slung along, straightened up as if galvanized. "You go! You go!" they over to Jim Barker," demanded one whom Go Ahead had heard the other call "Hen." "That's the idea. Sorry if it doesn't suit you. . . . Hold on! Maybe I've got the name wrong." Go Ahead turned to Stella. "Didn't you say the Loboville sheriff's name was Barker?" he asked.

Stella nodded. "Thought so. . . . Yes, Barker's the man. Got any objections?" Go Ahead looked at "Hen." That individual, a lean and lanky fellow, nodded frowningly. "Yes, I've got objections," he rasped. "Hen was quick to catch on and to play up to Stella—as he thought."

"I object to the whole d—n thing and to Jim Barker in particular. You go! You go! Right to hold me up this way!"

"Tut, tut, tut! Tell it to Barker; and the faster you hop along the quicker you can tell him. March!"

Go Ahead watched them go with a twinkle in his eye. "That'll help square you with Barker, Bob," he suggested as he mounted his horse.

The rest of the ride was silent. The two prisoners hurried along with a briskness that equaled that of the first half mile after Go Ahead had captured them. Go Ahead himself was planning well in advance, and Stella was immersed in her own thoughts—which were decidedly confused.

And so they came to Loboville. Few people were visible, but among those that were Go Ahead, watching keenly, spied black Caesar hurrying away toward the other end of the street.

At the same moment Stella plucked Go Ahead by the arm. "That's Jim Barker's office close to the courthouse," she explained, excitedly, "and that's Barker, just getting off his horse."

Coincidentally the two prisoners recognized Barker and almost ran toward him. Go Ahead and Stella followed swiftly.

Go Ahead nodded. "Howdy!" he said. "I suppose this is Sheriff Barker, isn't it? Glad to meet you, sheriff. Hoped I'd find you here. I've brought along a couple of bandits that I cut out of Fair's gang this noon. Bob tells me that the horses they were riding belonged to you. So I brought them in as horse thieves. Glad to turn them and the horses over to you."

Barker gasped. Almost literally he had been swept off his feet. That the man who had so humiliated him only a few hours before, the man whom he and his men had been chasing and trying to kill, should walk serenely into the very center of his power, bringing with him the girl over whom the entire war had originated, was really incredible. And that this man should bring in two of his own ranch hands as prisoners and two of his own horses and should turn them all over to him with such a speech was an actual nightmare. He did not know what to answer.

Meanwhile a crowd had been gathering with extraordinary rapidity. And the very large part of it that had heard Go Ahead's speech there, he agreed, hastily. "Drop in at the office any time when you get ready."

Go Ahead turned away, passing through the throng that opened for him and Bob. On its outskirts he brushed against Caesar, who, with the rest, was apparently looking on. Go Ahead stopped and looked at the negro as if the latter had asked him something.

"Haven't got time to talk horses now, boy," he said loudly. "If you've got any bring three or four around to Bridget's after dinner to-night." Then he walked on.

Go Ahead did not hasten to reply. Deliberately he dismounted, while Barker stood waiting. Then—

"Oh, back in the hills to the north," he answered, carelessly. "They and some other bandits were chasing me and Bob. And do you know, sheriff, these fellows had the nerve to say they were acting by your orders."

Up to this moment the two captives had kept silence. They had realized that they were mere pawns in the game, not supposed to act of their own initiative. However, they did not know what Barker wanted them to say. But when he denounced them they imagined he was playing a part and became suddenly eager to follow his lead. Consequently, when Go Ahead shifted his attack and centered attention on them with such bewildering suddenness, they burst into clamorous speech.

"We didn't," they cried. "He's a liar, Jim. We never named your name."

A roar of laughter swept the crowd—chiefly from Barker's own adherents. Under its impact his own swarthy face grew actually black with anger. Toward the men he sprang.

But Go Ahead stepped in his way. "Hold on, sheriff," he protested. "I'm not questioning the right of you to beat his own dog, and if these men told the truth, when they said they were yours, go ahead. But if they lied—"

Go Ahead paused suggestively. "Lied? Of course they lied! I never saw them before," Barker

was on the defensive—though he could not imagine how he had got there. "Then I don't think you've got any right to unhand them."

Barker squirmed. He felt confusedly that there was something wrong in Go Ahead's argument, but for the life of him he could not find the error. Incontinently he surrendered.

Around he looked, then called to one of his deputies, who was pressing toward him. "Hey, Miller," he ordered. "Take these horse thieves and lock them up."

Then, as the deputy caught hold of the bewildered men, Barker turned to Go Ahead. "Come into the office, will you?" he invited.

"I'd like to get this story straight," Barker said. "I'll drop in later. Just now Bob and I want to get something to eat. We're hungry. Guess we'll go to Bridget's and get some grub and a room."

"A room!" Barker's eyes bulged. Was it possible that this man had not yet discovered Bob's sex?

Go Ahead did not understand. With some perplexity he answered. "Why, yes," he said. "Bridget has rooms, hasn't she?"

"Yes. But you—you—you—"

Barker broke off. He had meant to say "I don't married yet, are you?" but he caught himself just in time. Abruptly he realized that Stella did not look like a girl to anyone present except himself and to two or three others who knew the facts. He also realized that for him to recognize Fair's daughter would be to supply another thread for the web of evidence that seemed to be closing about him.

"Oh, sure, you can get rooms there," he agreed, hastily. "Drop in at the office any time when you get ready."

Go Ahead turned away, passing through the throng that opened for him and Bob. On its outskirts he brushed against Caesar, who, with the rest, was apparently looking on. Go Ahead stopped and looked at the negro as if the latter had asked him something.

Go Ahead did not hasten to reply. Deliberately he dismounted, while Barker stood waiting. Then—

"Oh, back in the hills to the north," he answered, carelessly. "They and some other bandits were chasing me and Bob. And do you know, sheriff, these fellows had the nerve to say they were acting by your orders."

Up to this moment the two captives had kept silence. They had realized that they were mere pawns in the game, not supposed to act of their own initiative. However, they did not know what Barker wanted them to say. But when he denounced them they imagined he was playing a part and became suddenly eager to follow his lead. Consequently, when Go Ahead shifted his attack and centered attention on them with such bewildering suddenness, they burst into clamorous speech.

"We didn't," they cried. "He's a liar, Jim. We never named your name."

A roar of laughter swept the crowd—chiefly from Barker's own adherents. Under its impact his own swarthy face grew actually black with anger. Toward the men he sprang.

But Go Ahead stepped in his way. "Hold on, sheriff," he protested. "I'm not questioning the right of you to beat his own dog, and if these men told the truth, when they said they were yours, go ahead. But if they lied—"

Go Ahead paused suggestively. "Lied? Of course they lied! I never saw them before," Barker

was on the defensive—though he could not imagine how he had got there. "Then I don't think you've got any right to unhand them."

Barker squirmed. He felt confusedly that there was something wrong in Go Ahead's argument, but for the life of him he could not find the error. Incontinently he surrendered.

Around he looked, then called to one of his deputies, who was pressing toward him. "Hey, Miller," he ordered. "Take these horse thieves and lock them up."

Then, as the deputy caught hold of the bewildered men, Barker

turned to Go Ahead. "Come into the office, will you?" he invited.

"I'd like to get this story straight," Barker said. "I'll drop in later. Just now Bob and I want to get something to eat. We're hungry. Guess we'll go to Bridget's and get some grub and a room."

"A room!" Barker's eyes bulged. Was it possible that this man had not yet discovered Bob's sex?

Go Ahead did not understand. With some perplexity he answered. "Why, yes," he said. "Bridget has rooms, hasn't she?"

"Yes. But you—you—you—"

Barker broke off. He had meant to say "I don't married yet, are you?" but he caught himself just in time. Abruptly he realized that Stella did not look like a girl to anyone present except himself and to two or three others who knew the facts. He also realized that for him to recognize Fair's daughter would be to supply another thread for the web of evidence that seemed to be closing about him.

"Oh, sure, you can get rooms there," he agreed, hastily. "Drop in at the office any time when you get ready."

Go Ahead turned away, passing through the throng that opened for him and Bob. On its outskirts he brushed against Caesar, who, with the rest, was apparently looking on. Go Ahead stopped and looked at the negro as if the latter had asked him something.

"Haven't got time to talk horses now, boy," he said loudly. "If you've got any bring three or four around to Bridget's after dinner to-night." Then he walked on.
